

<http://www.coincoin.fr.eu.org/?Bayer-Fights-India-s-Compulsory>

Bayer Fights India's Compulsory Licensing Of Cancer Drug By Claiming It Spent $2.5 Billion Developing

It Date de mise en ligne : mardi 12 février 2013

- 6- Webographie -

Copyright © L'Imp'Rock Scénette (by @_daffyduke_) - Tous droits réservés

Bayer Fights India's Compulsory Licensing Of Cancer Drug By Claiming It Spent $2.5 Billion Developing

Back in March last year, the Indian government announced that it was granting its first compulsory license, for the anti-cancer drug marketed as Nexavar, whose $70,000 per year price-tag put it out of reach of practically everyone in India. Nexavar's manufacturer, the German pharmaceutical giant Bayer, naturally appealed against that decision, and the hearing before the India Intellectual Property Appeals Board (IPAB) has now begun. Jamie Love has provided a useful report on the proceedings ; here's his summary of what's at stake :

On Techdirt. [6GxPwpHHON8]

Cet article est repris du site <http://feedproxy.google.com/~r/blog...>