

<http://www.coincoin.fr.eu.org/?Google-Decides-Smartphone-Market>

Google Decides Smartphone Market Share Is More Important Than Net Neutrality

- 6- Webographie -

Date de mise en ligne : mardi 12 février 2013

---

Copyright © L'Imp'Rock Scénette (by @_daffyduke_) - Tous droits réservés

---

As a recent post noted, net neutrality is under threat in France, with ISPs like Free asking Google to pay extra for delivery of its traffic. According to this post on the Forbes Web site, Google has already agreed to pay the French telecoms company Orange in precisely this way. As well as damaging the whole principle of net neutrality, something that Google has been championing for many years, this would seem to be a pretty bad business decision. After all, if Orange is now getting paid to carry Google's traffic, why shouldn't every other telecom company out there also receive money for delivering Google's services ?

On Techdirt. [qHSa-HdJ9Yo]

Cet article est repris du site <http://feedproxy.google.com/~r/blog...>